

I choose to pay for my satellite radio and the commercial-free premium it provides. That is the American way. There is no basis or reason for the federal government to prevent local content from being a part of my satellite radio enjoyment. The on-demand weather and traffic information is most useful. I know where to get it when I need it and never have to wait for important information. Changing stations only to miss the most important information is a thing of the past. Waiting through commercials for timely information is unproductive and useless. I get the information I need on my satellite radio, when I need it.

The reason I pay for satellite radio is because of the non-commercialized content it provides. It provides content way beyond the corporate FM radio format currently available. The broadcasters clearly choose to feed the American public their narrow view of what radio communication should be. Please do NOT regulate localized content out of satellite radio.

Mark Kleinknecht
Redford, Michigan